I believe that this artifact reflects the ability to interpret existing knowledge. I was asked to make an annotated bibliography for my research paper. This type of bibliography requires that the sources are relevant to ones paper and also requires one to critiques sources. In this bibliography I explain economic concepts that were relevant to my research. I used this bibliography to create a literature review which I used in my own research. I also was required to critique and assess my sources. All of the above required that I interpret the economic concepts of my sources. The creation of this bibliography took an entire semester and was turned in three times before completion. This paper is from labor economics, one of the first upper level classes that I took in economics. Thus, I do not expect that the explanations of economic concepts in this bibliography to be perfect.
